Overview

The elders have always played an important role in society as leaders, caregivers, and guardians of tradition, yet they are also very vulnerable, as they are more susceptible to chronic diseases and their complications, deterioration in functional ability, disability, and discrimination against the elderly and its negative consequences for them, as health care improves, the number of older people grows, so do their needs and their contributions to humanity.

From this standpoint, an initiative to develop services for the elderly was launched and a model for receiving ideas via Twitter was made available
